

P R E S S E M I T T E I L U N G

14. Dezember 2009

Vortrag Luka Arsenjuk: The workers' century

The American cultural historian Michael Denning has recently suggested that the twentieth century should be called "the workers' century." Indeed, the emancipatory struggles that went on in the twentieth century can hardly be conceptualized without recognizing at their center the effects of the figure of the worker. But if the first half of the political twentieth century is traversed entirely by the search for and the construction of worker power, then the second half can be said to have been characterized by the seeming exhaustion of the figure of the worker, its crisis, and by the emergence of other – multiple – figures of politics.

Luka Arsenjuk will suggest in this lecture that the difficulty of imagining new contemporary forms of politics and political organization today stems from our uncertainty about the present political status of the figure of the worker. He will then propose to examine how the figure of the worker has been conceived in that other wellknown twentieth century, "the century of cinema." The aim is to trace the parallel histories of the two centuries, of the figure of the worker in politics and in cinema, and ask about the ways they might or might not elucidate each other.

Luka Arsenjuk

The Workers' Century.

The Figure of the Worker between Cinema and Politics

Vortrag am IFK, Wien

21. Dezember 2009, 18.00 Uhr c.t. (öffentlich zugänglich, freier Eintritt)

Vortrag in englischer Sprache

Luka Arsenjuk studierte Cultural Studies an der Universität von Ljubljana. Er ist derzeit Ph. D. candidate in the Program in Literature an der Duke University in North Carolina und IFK_Junior Fellow.

Publikationen (u. a.): gem. mit Michelle Koerner, Eisenstein's Laughter, in: KINO, 7; (Hg.), Study, Students, Universities (Polygraph: An International Journal of Culture and Politics, 21), 2009; How To Film Marx's Capital: On Alexander Kluge's New Film, in: Ekran, 34, February-March 2009; Eisenstein's Idea of Intellectual Cinema, in: KINO, 5/6, Fall 2008; A Configuration of Political Cinema, in: Ekran, 32, February-March 2007; On Jacques Rancière, in: Eurozine, 2007-03-01, www.eurozine.com/articles/2007-03-01-arsenjuk-en.html.